Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Utter the words international crisis and most people s thoughts fly to the greater Middle East or to East Asia. Many experts, on the other hand, are looking to Africa right now. Failed states and lawless enclaves - some of them larger than France - dot the continent. Numerous de facto civil wars, the worldwide greatest increase in radical militant Islam, potential for genocide - the outlook for the dark continent seems dark indeed. The implications extend far beyond the suffering of the African peoples. Terrorists and drug cartels are using Africa as a convenient stepping stone to Europe. Iran and China, among other rivals to the West, are investing human and financial capital to establish footholds, and gain control over the continent s strategic minerals and energy reserves. This issue of Hampton Roads International Security Quarterly examines several ongoing African crises in depth, analyzes underlying causes, and introduces some potential solutions. United States and international policies are discussed, and improvements to these policies are proposed. In total, this issue contains twenty presentations by American and African regional experts, scholars, aid specialists, and policymakers. The volume is divided into five sections to provide the most coherent overview - peacekeeping operations in Africa, the current national/regional crises in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mali and Nigeria, and finally trade policies as an instrument for stabilizing Africa. As always, we wish you interesting reading.
