Do you desire me to marry him asked Miss Castle, quietly. Let me finish, said her uncle. Jane, he added, turning on his sister, if you could avoid sneezing for a few moments, I should be indebted to you. Miss Jane Garcide, a sallow lady of forty, who suffered with colds all winter and hay-fever all summer, meekly left the room. Miss Castle herself leaned on the piano, tearing the pink petals from a half-withered rose, while her guardian, the Hon. John Garcide, finished what he had to say and pulled out his cigar-case with decision. I have only to add, he said, that James J. Crawford is one man in a million. Her youthful adoration of Garcide had changed within a few years to a sweet-tempered indifference. He was aware of this; he was anxious to learn whether the change had also affected her inherited passion for truthfulness. Do you remember a promise you once made he inquired, lighting his cigar with care. Yes, she said, calmly. When was it On my tenth birthday. He looked out...
